At half-past twelve o'clock the procession entered Oak Ridge Cometory. The largest number of citizens had proceeded to the burial ground ahead of the procession, and when the inneral cortage arrived, every elevated point in the vicinity of the vault was densely erowded. The guards cleared a space in front of the tomb, which was immediately occupied by mourners and distinguished digultaries. It is estimated that fifty thousand people witnessed and participated in the funeral of Abraplumes of the hearse, and the fa'r blossoms, so ham Llacola to day. No man was ever so hon ored before. It is certain that Oak Ridge Cem etery was rever so thronged before, and perhaps never will be so again. It is not necessary, nor do I believe it is asked f my countrymen, to make vile affectations in his time of their misfortune; to profess a sud-osition to be saved.

The want of intelligent Virginians, just now, is a Virginian party—one that will not go out of the severe discussion of its needs and interests to associate itself with strunge parties, and to affect the true of Northern journals; one that, recognizing the failure of the Confederate cause, may yet aftern the failure of the Confederate cause, may yet aftern to less than of advantage, and to preserve, above all things, the glorious historical name which is not only ber libratious and veneral is title to the regards of the world, but the lambiar comment of each of her clizeus. It is for these who think toolly and well to remember that the glory of history is indifferent to events; it is simply beaut.

It is, jethans, impossible to enumerate fully those terms on which the people of Virginia are disposed to accept the now indispussable necessity of a return to the Union. But there are already indicated some conditions of such action, which are plain suggestions of her honor and interest, and which are already laying the foundation of a healthy and conservative discussion of a step of so much importance and delleavy. These suggestions are:

1. Virginia to return to the Union, as of her own will and deliberation, by the action of her proper representative body; and not by the force of any Federal proclamation, military decree, or other foreign interference.

2. The integrity of her territory, or that question to be decided by a convention—the Pierpont government, if recognized at all in Richmond, to be recognized only until the State authority can be reorganized—to fill only the transition period. a Virginian party—one that will not go out of he severe discussion of its needs and interests to

To myself these duties are forbid. My fate, indeed, appears to be a peculiar one. I bear in my person extraordinary marks of Yankee revenge. I do not complsin of them; nor do I alfect that vanity which parades the penalties of authority for decorations; and yet I may rec'te them for the benefit of history. My whole oftence in the past war is that or the pen. With that I made a legitimate criticism on men and events, and more than once challenged Southern criticism by my candor in the statement of facts. For such offence—for doing nothing more than making a historical study of events passing before my eyes—I have snifered every invention of Yankee penalty. I have had my projectly confiscated and sold under the hammer in Washington City. I have been thrice in prison. I was taken on the high seas and put in Fort Warren. I was, on another occasion, put in solitary confinement in Fortress Monroe; I was recently incarcerated in Castle Thunder, and I have chitalned my release only on the condition of exite.

have obtained my release only on the condition of exile.

I can never consent to make terms with injustice. And yet oppression has left me something. I know very well that the cause of the Confederacy is lost; I recognize the fact before my eyes of Northern success in the war, I am not disposed to dispute or disparage the authority which that success has established. It is only the fool who splits against the wind. But there is one consolation of which uo authority can rob me—one thing with respect to which no lumns power can claim jurisdiction or exercise compulsion. It is that integrity of personal honer which refuses to change its opinions a title command of events, and to play the hype crite with fortune; and which, though it projuses no mad and desperate action, and contits not the attitude of nesless and indecorous definice, yet asserts its virtue to its own con-

THE KENTUCKY NATIONAL LEGION GLASGOW, KY., May 4, 1805.
To the Editors of the Louisville Journal:

To the Editors of the Louisville Journal:

According to an act of the General Assembly of Kentucky, approved March 4, 1865, to organize and discipline the militia of Kentucky, it is provided that one company of the active militia, to be styled and attached to the Kentucky National Legion, shall be recruited and organized in each regimental district or county in the State subject to the orders of the Governor, &c. The line officers of this organization are all elective, and no officer will be commissioned for recruiting purposes. Will some one inform those wishing to organize companies under this act how recruits will be supplied with rations and blankets (which are undispensable.) The difficulties under which recruite labor in the southern counties of Kentucky render it necessary that they should go to quarters as soon as culfisted, or they would become an immediate prey to guerillas, who would hant them up like wolves, and slaughter them with less mercy. Two discharged captains have recently commenced recruiting a company of the active militia for Barren country, Kentucky, but when they failed to get quarters, rations, and supplies for their men, and were requelled to abandent the business, they

THE SOUTH.

[From the London Times of April 31.]

We can hardly suppose, after the late Intelligence, that the resistance of the South by means of organized armies can be protracted much lenger; but Southern resistance may easily take other forms, and the conrect events in this respect will probably soon be shown. It appears to have been hoped, we might perhaps say an thirsted, by the Northern people that the South might be willing so bury in ohilvon the whole of this desperate war, or to think of it only as a memorable incident of national life. On its own side the North would be ready with a complete amnesty and with open arms, asking nothing from the South but a return to that Union and those institutions which It had for a time unhappily repudiated. Bygonesshould be bygones. The civil war need only live in national memory as a grand straggle in which the heroism and endurance of all classes of Americans astonished the world. Neither beliggerents need be ashamed of the retrespect. Vederals and Confederates alike had malutained larger armies and fought more deterate buttles than any other people. If the South had done more with smaller means, the North had borne up with incredible tenacity against discombiume and discouragement, and had outstripped lungituation by the magnitude of its efforts. Let both parties forget and forgive. If the South will lut baulsh from its mind this vision of an ind pendent confederacy, and forego an idea which it has been found impossible to realize, the North will forget the trial of its resources and its strongth, and both sections of the Union may live together as before. These seem to be the hopes of the North, and extraordinary as such expectations may appear, we begive them to express the only basis on which peace can be really cetablished. Unless the South does consent to re-enter the Union, the end is as far off as ever. But will this phenomenon occur? We can only say that It Is, perhaps, less improbable among Americans than among any other people in the world.

It appears

une of the people. They are proud even of the schlevements of their Southern brethreu. They orget their mountain of debt and alt the terrible sufferings of the four years' war. They arriging their government to offer the most limited their to their late enemies, on the single condition of submission and agreement, and in his they are guided prophelly notes by feeling

The tremeudous character of the Confederate defeat becomes more clearly apparent with the The tremeucous character of the Conficerate deteat becomes more clearly apparent with the fuller and later intelligence which we receive of the flight and the pursuit.

Whether the contest, thus, so far as armies in the fle'd are concerned, virtually at a close, will be prolonged by a frantic resistance of small parties, or an attempt at guerilla warlare, lies with the Confederate people to decide. There are doubtless some among their leaders whose counsel will still be for war, since peace, by negotiations which would secure them rank and position, is no longer to be hoped for. But in the rapid melting away of Lee's army we see ground for trust that these wild and criminal ideas will find little apport. That army comprised all that remained of valor and obstinacy in the late Confederacy, yet it has in these few days lost more by desertion and the process of spontaneous hreaking down than even by the attacks of the enemy. This is concinsive that it has lot hope and heart, as we know the provinces, and the remaining inhabitants of the Southern States, long aro had done. Pacification in these circumstances, follows defeat with no laward stee.

beyond a deutit that we shall have few difficulties to contend with as regards the future supply of cotton. We have shown that, with the exception of America, the production has rapidly increased during the last four years, that our actual wants have been met in spite of all the predictions to the contrary, and that we have now an accumulated stock.

The reduction in prices from the highest point has been important; but it has not interfered with the growth of the article. On the contrary, more land is now under entitivation in the East than has ever been known. Assuredly, great effects will be made to keep prices at their present range; but an unrestricted export from America would tell seriously against not a few of the importing houses.

THE RAM STONEWALL IN THE TACES

The Lordon Times of the 21st publishes a leter frem Mr. Harvey, the U. S. Minister to Lis bou, correcting some false impressions as to the firing into the Ningara at that port. He shows that the Federal commander was in no way t blame, and says:

This is not the proper place to speak of the diplomatic action which followed, but it may be said, as an answer to much misstatement, that the representation was confined to the facts, and that explanations and reparation have been accepted. A House-tlesh Dinner.—A grand horse-flesh banquet took place in Paris on Tuesday. Horse-soup, horse boiled are choir, horse can have a most, horse roast, here pate de fine with truffles, were en cessively eaten and discussed. At dessert, M. de Quatrelages, the chairman of the Horse-flesh Committee, drank to the memory of Geoffroy de Saint Hilaire, who first suggested the Idea of turning the horse to the vile use of feeding markind. M Gustave Geoffroy Saint Hilaire, the director of the Jardin d'Acclimation, returned thanks for the honor done to his father. M Jules Dalbrack next addressed the company. He said that whereas now horses were abused and made to work while breath was in them, once accepted as an article of food, palus would be taken by their possessors to preserve them from injury, and a speedler end would be put to their life of toll, by the necessity of killing them tefore they had attained a great tage. This, however, was victoriously refuted by the next speaker, the director of the Veterinary school of all ort, who as und the guest that, in order to prove that a horse was good for tood to the last, he limself had supplied the chef of the Grand Hotel for the dinner they had just eaten, with piaces of used up old animals, with scarcely any flesh on their bones, the youngest of the lot having attained fourteen years and the others twenty, and even two-and twent) years of age.

The following resolutions were adopted

Readred, That we now believe it to be of duty and interest, and it is also our wish, to turn in good faith to our former allegiance the United States, and to lend our willing a salive so operation to any measure or measure. dividually and collectively pledge onreselves, that those of us who may still have friends or relatives in rebellion against the United States, to use our respective influences with them, whenever opportunity may offer, to Induce them to lay down their arms and return to their rmer alleglance.
Resolved, That the United States ought to b

s magnanimous to forgive as she is powerful opinish, and we recommend amnesty, repe-f confiscation, and removal of civil disabilitie The tone of the speeches corresponded with the resolutions, and were indeed more outsp en in reference to the hopelessness of the rebellion and the necessary sacrifice of slavery The inceting was solemn in character, but was clieved somewhat of its sombre line by the following good-natured and witty remarks of Col. Grace, of Arkansas, who gave his fellow-sufferers to understand that he had inspected the lephant to his entire satisfaction. SPEECH OF COLONEL GRACE laration of Independence you went agalu to Virg'nia, and found him in the person of Thomas Jetlerson; and even in our error we have shown greatness. So, I say that the South is not an insignificant people; and if so great a people as they are cannot whip the world, who cannot come to the inevitable conclusion that the North is greater? [Laughter.] And I am not going to shultify myself by saying I have been whilped by nobody. Now it is our duty to repent and go back to this great national church—repent, get absolution, and be baptised afresh. [Laughter.] I know we will receive honerable and just terms. When I had an interview with the President, his heart seemed to be ever overificating with love toward the Southern people. We first went out of the Union and threw down the gage of battle, and the North lebeld it my we fired the lirst gun and took the little for the light, we fired the lirst gun and took the little for the light, and so we thought of them, but, to cur sorrow, we have found ont different; they seemed to spring up like mushrooms from all parts of the earth. The poor people in the towns and in the country, above all the proletariats, who belonged to the Protestant ehnrch, made known their wish to embrace the Russian orthodox religion. Numerous changes of faith took place, and in less than a year 117,000 Protestants went over to the orthodox, church. The Protestant nobles and the Protestant elergy were astonished at a circumstance which assumed such immense proportions. The report was apread among the people that peasants who embraced the orthodox faith would receive permission to leave the Baltic provinces; that land would be assigned to them, &c. The Government gave an efficial dealal to these reports, and indeed ordered that those who embraced the Greek religion should expressly declare that they had not done so in view of an improved insterial condition, but in obedience to powerful convictions. But all these measures by no means prevented the conversions from continning. The Protestant nobles, arged by their clergy, demanded from the Government laws which should limit this movement. This, as has been stated, occurred about twenty years since. At present the converted people find themselves in the gracest taisery. An investigation has already shown that the persecution of the convertis began, indeed, in 1815. They were banished from the estates belonging to most of the Protestant proprietors, everywhere they were fulled work, and the Protestant clergy not ok place in the Baltle provinces. The poor cople in the towns and in the country, above only showed animosity toward them from the pulpit, but even refused to grant them Christian burial. The Government has now ordered the trictest investigation to be made into the cirt)fileial Intelligence has reached Washington hat on the 4th inst. Jeff Davis and his confrer were surprised and nearly captured by Stone man's men. They came upon them, and although Jeff and his company for the time cluded the pursuit of our troops, they are enirely surrounded, and there is scarcely a posability of their escape. News is momentarily expected of the capture the rebel President and party. The coming grand review of the army is h ing discussed, and as it is a fixed fact that this about the 1-t of June, a suitable position and grounds for such a display at an early day will be determined by common accord. It would seem now that the choice has faller upon the Pull Run battle-field as in every wav a fit and proper position. The great conspira morning; as was expected. The detail of the court was made ont on Saturday, but up to noon to-day one of the distinguished officers therein had not been heard from, and it was deemed advisable, in order to have his presence at the commencement of the hearing, to postpone the rials till to-morrow or next day.

SPECIAL TO THE POUSVILLE TOURNAL WASHINGTON, May 8.

The Government is in possession of positive aformation that Davis and his Cabl partles to the plot which resulted in Mr. Lin-Thompson and his confreres in Canada is equal-

I arrived here last evening in advance of the 5th corps, which will encamp around Petersburg to-night. Gen. Sherman's army left the Neuse river, near Raleigh, on Monday, Ma 1st. The army of Tennessee, Mai Gen. lloward commanding, passed northward through Lonieburg, Warrenton, Lawrenceville, and Dinwiddie Court-house. The Army of Georgia, Major-General Slocan ommanding, passed far to the left, moving di cetty to Richmond via Appomattor Court-house. Orders respect ug the conduct of the troo. s towards the citizens were issued by both army and corps commanders. They were very strict, and were faithfully observed. The flanks of the columns were vigilantly patrolled, and all stragglers were arrested and reported to the proper officers for punishment. Foraging was conducted by commissioned officers, who were instructed to pay citizens the highest market price for all supplies collected.

I did not leave Raleigh till thirty-six hours stood politically. I have never been a secusion of the army. I travelled on after the departure of the army. I travelled ou the read twenty miles in the rear of the 15th and 17th corps, whose burning propensities were notoriously developed in South Carolina, and found the citizens everywhere speaking lu the most flattering terms of the conduct of the tute of the plainest necessaries of life, and look torward with considerable anxiety to any opfor food and raiment, as I have ever found in the past two and a hall years of experience in

The poorer classes, the white laborers, and the blacks are in ecstacles over our successes. The wealthy slavebolders, the aristocracy, harbor still bitler and undying hostility. A great line of march are anxious to sell their plantations at a sacrifice, and qult the country. Colonel Ross, of General Logan's staff, pnrchased a fine plantation at a nominal price of an aristocratic North Carolinian, who is preparing to expatriate himself. This class talk very hopefully of an early embroilment of our Government with foreign Powers, and declare that when that comes the subjugated malcon. tents of the Sonth will rally again, under the standards of our foes and thus realize their wild dreams of a Southern slave Confederacy. At Warrenton and in Brnnswick county, Va., found the most inveterate and intolerable reliels. The roads are lined with rebel officers and soldiers, going to their homes. They are invariably more conrteous than the stay-athome aristocrais, who are sullen and often insolent. The country I came through shows no marks of wars or ravages by which the soldiers secount for the untamed pride and arrogance that characterizes the people.

Mejor-General John A. Logan's 15th corps has made the most remarkable march on record. Since leaving Raleigh, the corps has marched ne hundred and fifty mile- In five and a half days, bridging three large streams-the Neuse, he Roanoke, and the Nottoway. Capt. Whiteend, of Gen. Logan's staff, who has not been out of the saddle for thirty-six hours, has ju t arrived, reporting Gen. Hogan's 2d division just going into eamp. Gen. Hogan's division was the first to reach Petersburg.

Washington, May 3.

A special to the New York Times says: Information was received at army beadquarters to-day of the final surrender of Dick Taylor, commanding in Alabama and Mississippi, to Gen. Canby. It is a remarkable fact that this news and other despatches were received over rebel telegraph lines direct from Macon to Washington.

General Wilson is still in Macon. The escape of Davis is, therefore, next to Imposible. It is said that Davis, after leaving Yorkville, S. C., reached Washington, Georgia, on the 4th. From here he was again driven by the approach of General Sherman. The direction taken indicates an attempt to cross the Mississippl river, but he will find Willson in his path.

The advance of Howard's corps reached Black and White Station on the Southside Railroad on Saturday, having marched one hundred and fifty miles in five days.

President Juarez, of the Mexican Republic, has issued letters of marque, and reprisal against the French commerce.

The Herald's special says: The large receipts from the sale of 5-20s enables the Secretary to pay off requisitions of long standing. The financial athirs of the Government are now working more easily than for many mouths past, and there is no doubt but that linds sufficient to pay off our soldiers will be ohtained in a few weeks.

Itls capeted that every dollar of the public indebtedness will be discharged.

A special to the Tribune says: Win. R Donalson, a circus clown, has been arrested as a participator in the Philadelphia arson plot.

Notwithstanding there is an effort to cast censure on Sergeant Corbett for shooting Booth, the act was approved at the time by all present, and is now approved of by his own superior officers.

cers. Corbett did not tire until he saw Booth taking aim at one of the officers, and then he had only intended to wound him. Corbett had pre-viously asked to be permitted to enter the barr once, but this was several times denied him he lailure of Gov. Fenton to promote him l cause of regret. New York, May 9. The Herald's special says, the evidence in po-

Jeff Davis and his proscribed associales is such that no foreign Government will hesitate a moment in giving them up. President Johnson's proclamation for their apprehension has been sent throughout the South, over rebet telegraph lines. There was another long cybluct session to day on the subject of throwing open the South to unrestricted trade.

The Herald's North Carolina correspondent says that when negotiations for Johnston's surrender commenced he had about $60,000 wanted to be paroled. So anxions were they to get out of the army and return home that they stole all horses they could from their officers and struck off ocross the country and engaged in Indiscriminate plundering.

Gen, Johnston admitted he had no control over them. He spoke very bitterly against Davis, attributing all the retel failures to his administrative bungling. He considers South Carolina the worst whipped State in the Union.

THE NORTH CAROLINA SECRETARY OF STATE DEFINING HIS POSITION. [From the Raleigh Progress, April 24.]
RALFIGH, N. C., April 21.

Mr. Editor: In your leave of day before yes-terday you wrote as follows: 'In speaking of the flight of Governor Vance, we do not wish other party name we have been designated. But, sir, it is not my purpose to attempt my own political vindication now, and under surrounding circumstances I have no motive for doing so. It is a mortifying reflection with conservative men to day that come of us have acted, not only incensistently, but against our judgment and convictions of right-during the revolution. To every secessionist I would say, "Go and sin no more. "To every conservative I would say, "Come, let us do better," A great work is before us at the close of this revolution. Dementic slavery ought to be, must be abolished at once and forever in North Carolina; and when this shall have been done, reconciliation will be quick and general, if not universal. The abolition of slavery is a condition precedent to the esttlement of our national difficulties upon any sait-factory and permanent basis. You and Myer, addressed the assembly in the following words: Before we begin to transact our regular business let us remember the joyful and important news which has arrived within the last few days from the other side of the Atlantic occurs. Let us remember and erjoy the great victory won by the armies of the Union over the rebellion of the slave-holders. Bremen is and always has been on the most intimate terms with the United States Many of our sons are fighting in the ranks of the Federal army, and the men of free labor and the Germane have shown that persistency and valor which must finally coaquer. Gentlemen, let us show our sympathy with the American Union by rising frem our sents. The entire essembly rose and gave three enthusiastic choers for the victory of the just quice."

We now return to Vaninka. Contrary to the fears of friends, she had been so long in a state of agonizing suspense, that any certainty, even this cireful one, was a relief. Still her step did not regain its clasticity, and her grief, if not loud, was deep. Her friends mistook despair for calmness. She grew paler and thinner, and now frequently kept her room for days together. The darkness came. The tempest gather And thursder murered loud and deep Mermured a voice in Thora's chamber, "Thora, my Thora, dost thou cleants" Her lever had been gone some eight months. George Weimar was a gentle, mild old man of allout seventy years of age, wealthy, and of large influence in the native town. He was an old riend of Vaulaka's father, and had long thought of seeking Vaninka for his bride. When, however, he had seen the place coveted about to be worthilly filled, he had become eilent on the subject of his desires, and cultivated the acquaintance of his lady love's betrothed. Now, declived as others were by Vaninka's quiet gemeanor, he advanced his snit. The god old man was too happy to have his offer accepted on any terms, and he thanked her warmly. A day was soon set for the wedding, and all things were making ready.

"Some years ago," said the Doctor, lighting a frame of Markwart, who lived among the bushwhackers up at Lederville, in Montgomery cunty. He was a paper-box maker by trade, but with the many-sidedness of a German, he was also an excellent taxidermist as well as thorough, naturalist; and during what might be called his leisure hours, collected quite a large number of our Pennsylvania birds, beasty, and reptiles. As Markwart alwavs had something new to show to me—oue time ground-nuts; another time Isalian brocoll: another time cultivated mushrooms, or artichokes, the fruit and not root of which was eaten—I went out with him expecting some new surprise—and I met It! Coming to a small pile of earth he plunges his hands in, and digging with his fingers, brought out what appeared like a large tuber of some new species. Intensely interested, I squatted down and stooped over it. As the earth fell off, I saw it was a porter-bottle, and at the same Waterloo, in the same regiment with Henry order, and he requested me to deliver this to sice of such imploring agony that the young I saw it was a porter-bottle, and at the sar instant he pulled out its cork, and putting directly under my nose, said, with great emph

One cannot imagine the effect of such language uttered by the minister of God in such a time of doubt and suspense. He ceased, and, as he closed the Bible and exclaimed "Amen! so let it be," a silence, profound and death-like, re ted on the andience. Each one seemed to feel as if an invisible presence was there, and some weighty announcement was just at hand. Saddenly the deep hush was broken by the distant elatter of a horse's hoof along the road. The sharp and rapid strokes told of swift rioing and of uncent haste. They knew at once what it meant. government was a possible boon to the English race.

The war opened in 1612, and continued seven years. It would probably have been dulshed in half that time, but for the besitance and half measures of Essex, the first parliamentary general. The first condict of Edgehili has its exact parallel in Antietam It was a drawn battle; both parties lying all night on their arms; but, in the morning, Hampdea came np with four thousand fresh men. Julius Cassar would have followed up quickly the former day's work, and, with blow upon blow, finished the royalisis and the war. Instead of this the armies "looked at each other," dreaded to renew the fight, and drew off, each by itself, much to the chegrin and disgust of Hampden. Five thousand were left slain upon the field—slain to no purpose, as nothing was decided. So We clip from Fraser's Magazine the followlng picturesque comparison between the Virginia of the olden time and the Virginia of o-day. The point about the skylark is both Abont sixteen years ago, as I was wandering About sixteen years ago, as I was wandering through the beautiful meadows that slope to the Rappahannock river, beside Falmouth and Fredericksburg, in the State of Vinglinia, there started up before me, soaring and singing, a bind entirely different from any that I had ever seen or heard there before. I afterward learned that the old colonial Governor, Spottswood, who had rusided there, and after whom the county was named Spottsvivania, had imported a large number of English skylarks, with the the hope that they too might be colonized. But the experiment did not succeed. There are only traditions of the few and far between visits of these little angels, of which I cherish the belief that I witnessed one. The song which then arrested my attention only by its novelty and sweetness, has gathered, in the years that have passed since then, a plaintive and almost mystic quality.

We may smile, on reading over these great battles, at the numbers engaged. They varied from twenty to twenty-five thousand men on each side, never exceeding the latter number. The battle of Marston Moor was the most obstinately-contested, between "the most numerons armies, that were engaged during the curse of these wars;" and in that battle, as Humplaments, fifty thousand British troops were led to metual slaughter. Such was the price pald; the end achieved was free government for the Enlish race every where.

To record some impressions of that past, and trace some tritus of the present, ere it also shall be completely buried, is the aim of this paper.

Virginia first appears in history as the fair frame about two noble figures—Captain John Smith and the Indian Princess Pocahontas. Their story is one of the few poetic traditions with which listori's so invariably open that are true. Pocahontas certainly did rush forward and clasp the head of the prostrate young English Captain, on which the tomulawk was about to descend in execution of her father's command. The stern heart of Powhattan was touched by this act of his child—she was but little over thirteen years of age at this time—and he consented that his captive should live to make tomahawks for himself and boads and bells for Pocahontas. Afterward the Indian king agreed to let Smith return to Johnstown on condition of his sending him two guns and a grindstone. When, soon after, Jamestown with all its stores was destroved by fire, and the colonists were perishing of cold and hunger, half of them were saved by the arrival of Pocahontas with bread, raccoons, and venison. It was about two years after Captain Smith's life sorrows of war-still more warnings of that | it is said more lives have been lost in our present war then the great civil wars of Greece, Rome, and England put together: and this might have been avoided had the North been a military people. THE FFFFT OF INTERVENTION.

It is well to look into the gulf of ruin from which our present civil war is to save us. Resolving the Union into thirty-six State sover-cignities would place us exactly where the Greek Autonomies were placed in their stringgle of twenty-seven years. It means mutual slanghter and dual collepse, notil some stronger third power comes in and acjuste the bleeding Iragments. Persia finally "intervened" in tavor of Eparts; and her hateful despotism was pressed down upon all the States of Hellas and her lovely islands. Thebes finally-received against it, led on by the great Epamlnonds; and a second series of civil wars brought on a more complete exhaustion, and a more deadly collapse. Philip of Macedon next "intervened," and crushed them still lower in the dust, amid the dying thunders of Demosthenes, and the fadit g glories of the Greetan name. Next Rome "intervened" and conquered Macedonia; and both Macedonia and Heilas went down together under het iron heel. the colonists were perishing of cold and hunger, half of them were saved by the arrival of Pocahontas with bread, raccoons, and venison. It was about two years after Captain Smith's life had been saved by Pocahontas that he came, from exploring a large portlon of the colony, to rest at Werowomoco, where King Powhattan and his danghter resided. The king, being absent, was sent for: and meantline Pocahontas, who, though well grown, was not yet sixteen years of age, called together a number of Indian maidens to arrange with her a dramatic entertainment for the hand-some young Englishman and his attendants. "They made a fire on a level field, and smith ast on a mat before it. A hideous noise and shricking were suddenly heard in the adjoining woods." The English smatched up their arms. Pocahontas rushed forward and asked Smith to slay rather than suspect her of perfidy, and their apprehensions were quieted. Then thirty young women ran out from the woods all naked, except a cincture of green leaves. Pocahontas were on her head a beautiful pair of buck's horns, an otter skin at her girdle, and another on her arm: a quiver hung on her shoulder, and either held a bow and arrow in her hand. The other nymphs had antlers on their heads and varions savage decorations. Bursting from the forest, they circled around John Smith and the fire, singing and crying "Love you not me?" They then disappeared in the woods. When they reappeared it was to inwite Smith to their hisbitations, where they circled around him again, dancing and crying "Love you not me?" They then feasted him richly; and lastly, with pine-knot torches, escorted him to hislodging. This Captain John Smith was, without donot, an imperial kind of man, and there is no wonder nor no donott that the Indian maiden felt aiready tender pelgitations on his account. A far different captain the fire started that the Indian maiden felt aiready tender pelgitations on his account. A far different captain to the pelgitations on his account. A Living Camillar—Gossip in Paris is astir with the terrible revenge exercised by the nails of the fair Mogador upon the eyes of Louise Leroux, which had wrought her grevious wrong by looking kindly where it was anything tur right. Mogador's life has been a sadly checkered one—created seemingly to point the moral and adorn the tale of that demimonde which in her day was considered as the bottom of the social scale, but which now takes the lead and soars above every other section of the circles into which the society of Paris is divided. Of all the specimens of her class which have at times risen into notice, none have had such hold upon our sympathies as Mogador. Dragged from the very gutters of Paris to the butterfly regions scarcely above, sue has struggled desperately all through life all the more to obtain her own self-respect, inasmuch as she has always been deprived of that of others. By dint of scarrifice and maintenance of the honest life which had become her great desire, she had acceeded in helping the Count de Chabrillan out of Clichy, where he had been placed by his relatives, who had bought up his debts. In gratitude, the Count married her, and having obtained through her credit the French consultable at the set of the A LIVING CAMILLE -Gossip in Paris is astir gratitude, the Count married her, and having obtained through her credit the French consulsip at Melbourne, set sall with her to that place. Here the happy couple remained for a few days, till death released the Count from all his burdens and colligations. During the time Mogador became the Countess de Chabrillan, and endeavored to behave as such. She wrote a novel or two. She went to the diggings. She tried her hand at various speculations, none of which, however, euriched the Count, who died almost insolvent as when he entered the prison of Clichy. Mogador returned to Europe and published her memoirs, which, being seized by the police, obtained the usual popularity which follows that measure, but failed to bring the prafits by which it should have been accompanied. Then did the shifts and changes of life togin once more for poor Mogador. Times had altered as well as herself during her absence. erent right was that which, at a later period, and Pocahontas spending the whole of a druk light climbing hills, tolling through thickets, o reach the tents of Smith and his companions, to warn them of the decree of death which Powhattan, under some alsunderstanding, had issued. Smith at this time offered her many beautiful presents, but, as he himself wrote, "with the tares running down her cheeks, she said she duret not be seen to have any, for if Powhattan should know it she were but dead; and so she ran away by herself as she came."

Some two years later Smith returned to England. The Indian princess was induced to marry John Rolfe by being told that Smith was dead. After being baptized—as one may see in Chapman's hape picture of that event in the rotunda of the Capitol at Washington—she was taken to England as Mrs. Rolfe At Brentford, where she was staying. Captain Smith visited her. She attered no word on seeing him, but, after a modest salntation, turned away and hid her face. She itemalned thus motioniess for nearly two hours. She then came forward to Smith, and tonchingly reminded him, in the presence of her husband and a large company, of the kindness she had shown him in her own country. 'I call dipromise Powhattaa, 'She said, 'What was yours should be his and he the lake to you. You called him furler, being in his land a stranger, and for the same reason so I must call you.'' After a long pause and much emodion she said. 'I will call you fother, and you shall call me child, and so I will be forever and ever your connervemen will lie mach.'' Our colonial anged died soon afterward, in 1617, leaving one child, Themas Rolfe, through whom must have come that enormous number of aristocratic Virginian families who claim to be the descendants of Pocahontas—a more honorable descend, by the way, in Virginia, than any traceable from the noblest ancestor that ever 'Came over with the Conqueror.''

A placard in the window of a patent-medicine vender in the Kue St. Honore, Paris, reade segin once more for poor Mogador. Times had altered as well as herself during her absence. It was no longer necessary to dance the frenzied dance of the Carribee Islands to obtain popularity; It was merely requisite to appear in rich garments and covered with lace and jewels, to behold the richest men of Paris prostrate at her feet: but the secret of obtaining these was nuknown to poor Mogador, and so site was compelled to turn to many of the trades which her more fortunate sisters had thrown aside. She wrote a play—it was hissed. She appeared upon the stage—she was not applanded. She cook the theatre, and became bankrupt; when, just as she was at the lowest depth of despair, eppears on the scene "an old friend," who, weary of the world and all within it, was glad to help the Countess to get rid of the debts on condition that she would help him to get rid of his enual. Fortune once more smiled upon her injured child—but only for a white. In the very midst of her new delight, a serpent crosses her path in the shape of Louise Leroux, who supplants her with the old friend, driving her once more to the uncertainty of hazard and all without. No wonder that, in a moment of adventure. No wonder that, in a moment of desperation, meeting the treacherons Louisc, he should have had recourse to her nails to prove her indignation. No wonder, moreover, that she should have heen locked up as a consequence of the act. The letter written by the Countess to the papers is a chef d'œurre in its way, full of passion and nature—such a one as Richardson himself would have written if called to paint the score in a novel. Altogether, the story of Mogador Countess de Chabrillan is one full of the peculiar interest, repulsion, and sympathy which belong to our own perullar time.

This long and deadly warfare could not have been prolouged through twenty-seven years, except for the fact that both Sparts and Athens were based on alsavery. The slaves tilled the soil; the citizens waged war. Slavery not only supplied the munitions, but it gave to the war savaree ferocity and brutality. Athens alone the process of this class now as we were when the war commenced. Our blockade of the rebell ports was not effected by regular war steamsavege ferocity and brutality. Athens alone ad four hundred thousand slaves to sixty thousand four hundred thousand slaves to sixty thousand four hundred thousand slaves to sixty thousand freemen. But Sparta was made present nextly barbarous and inhuman by the habit of formineering over slaves. Dating the progress of the war, learing an insurrection among her Helots at home, she proclaimed liberty to such as would come forward and join her armies. Two thousand brave men sprung up at the word "liberty" and presented themselves. They were never heard of more. They were led off secretly and massacred; and, by this fiendish recreitly and massacred; and, by this fiendish that of an enemy. ers, but principally by vessels purchased from slaves as would most likely to prove a dangerous element at home.

Our iron clads, as we have frequently stated, are fit only for harbor defence. Excepting the Ironsides, Galena, and Monadnock, none of them can venture to go to sea without a convoy to take them in tow. Our harbors, however, can be made perfectly secure by having swift torpedo-boats in them, which, in our opinion, are far more formidable than monitors. 1 L It is curious to contrast the numbers engaged in our with those engaged in the great wars of We select two decisive battles. One of these was fought in the harbor of Syracuse. In an expedition against Sleily, Atbens had strained every nerve and equipped a magnificent fleet and army. They sailed out of the Pircers with sound of trampiets, peans, and Ilbations of wine from gold and silver cups. This great army consisted of five thousand heavy-armed infantry. It was reinflored by another of about the same numbers. When gath ned at Syracuse they numbered in all—beavy-armed infantry, natives of the Island, and slaves, who were lightarmed and only employed as skirmishers—twenty thousand men This, in the language of Thucydides, made the power appear "stapendeus," and her resources "beyond calculation." commanding influence on the ocean, either in peace or in war, and for this reason we advocate the completion without delay of every useful vessel now in the course of construction. With the trained men and officers now in the service, scattered among our mosquito fleets, we could man them in the very best style. Vessels like the Amonosenek are far superior to any of their class in the world, and if properly manned will prove invaluable. Swifter than foreign fron-clods, they can run or fight at pleasure, and are large enough to carry torpedoboats, which will make them more formldable even than such ships as the Warrior or Achilles. We hope the new vessels will not be left to rot on the stocks, like the old line-of battle ships which were built shortly after the last war with Great Britain. The final and decisive battle was that of The final and decisive battle was that of Algospotami, when Athens lost her fieet, and really her whole array was surprised and taken prisoners. The numbers engaged in battle are not told; but the number of prisoners, who were native Athenians, is recorded as three thousand, which seems to have made up the bulk of her army in the last decisive engagement.

Ment.

As to the numbers engaged, the little State of Massachusetts has furnished more men in our present struggle than fought on both sides in the great English rebellion. It has sent more men into the field than Julius Casar commandut to gain the empire of the world; more than all the troops of Hellas put together in the long struggle that rent her in pieces, when her sun went down in blood. The State of New York has equipped more soldiers than all the troops of Casar and Pompey put together, though drawn from every province, from the Enphrates to the pillars of Hercules. The whole army of Cromwell would only serve as skiemishers, or as a detail for a "raid," froin the army of Grant or Sherman. His geat military fame was gained by managing twenty-live thousand men; and its marches and evolutions were whilin an area less extensive than the State of Virginia. OIL WELL MACHINERY. The great civil war of England, known as "the Great Rebellion," was also a conflict between the oligarchs and the commons; called again, the Cavaliers and the Roundhead, called again, the cavaters and the Roundlead, called again, more appropriately, the Klog and his Parllament. It divided England horizontally—the king and the lords and the bishops on one side, the commons on the other; and it decided the question forever, whether the constitutional government was a possible boon to the English race. D. B. DEWEY, General Agent. AT WOOD'S PATENT DRILLING MACHINE, PILE DRIVER,

AND Hydraulie Sand Pump. PRACTICAL TESTS HAVING FULLY DEMON strated the superiority of this machine over al others for the purpose of sinking Oil Wells, the under signed is now prepared to receive orders for the same. This machinery comprises everything requisite for the boring of oil wells, excepting the STEAM ENGINI AND CAST IRON DRIVING PIPE, (but will be fur nisbed, if desired, at a reasonable price), and dispense with the use of the Derrick Rope, Buil Wheel, and cum rous and expensive fixtures now in use, and is so ar anged, being constructed on wheels, and portable, that tean be easily removed for the purpose of sinking THE DETRITUS is removed from the well by or Patent Hydraulic process, and does not require the re-moval of the drill from the boring. This process not only removes all the detritism in from 5 to 12 minutes, but likewise effectually clears out and opens all the small oil veins that are so often entirely closed up by the old process of eand pumping. WITH THIS MACHINS and a practical angineer, a well can be sunk from 400 to 600 feet within a period of from 15 to 80 days after the soil pipe has been driven.

Arrangements are being made for the construction and delivery of these machines at New York, Norwich, Newborg, N. Y., and Pittsburg, Penn.
